The condition of the body shows that the victim made a brave fight for her life. The body was covered with bruises and blood, and the clothing was torn almost to shreds. The condition of the head showed that the girl had been pounded to death with a stone. The hat which she wore was beside her in the hole in which her murderer had burled her.

her.

There is as yet no clue. The part of the cometery in which her father's grave is located is very lonely, and the spot in which the body was found is just over the line of the cemetery. The sheriff has taken charge of the case, and the whole vicinity is being scoured in the hope of finding some clue that will lead to the arrest of the perpetrators of the crime.

From the Hartford Courant, That some men want but little here is shown by the contentment of the county convicts at Asheville, N. C. These convicts work at road-making, and the grand jury, mindful of their comfort, reported Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 9.—Owing to the jury, mindful of their comfort, reported continued trouble with labor unions and to Judge Ward that while they are well cared for, they have no seats at mealtime and are not provided with spoons, forks, or knives. The grand jury said that these conveniences should be supplied, but the convicts, with sweet reasonableness, say that they are satisfied with things as they are. They want no table accessories, they explain; cups without spoons meet all the requirements of the soup course. "A man and has taken out all due papers. When-

Quite Pelite.

From Tit-Bits. They were slight acquaintances, and there was no love lost between them "Well." said the first 'grande dame,' bye-bye. I must really be getting on. I have to make a call on my mother."

The second put up her lorgnette and

"Really-ah-you don't mean to say you have a mother living?" The first "grande dame" laughed, a high, thin laugh, with something biting, like acid, in it.

"Oh, yes," she retorted on the one who had tried to take her down, "my mother is still alive, and she doesn't look a day older than you do, I assure you.
